Research Experience and Grants:

2022-2025

Project: Facilitating Anti-Ableist Remote Music Making (The FAARMM Project)

- Brief Description of the Project: FAARMM entails three phases:
 1. Consult and Create: 25 participants will leverage their lived disability experiences as expertise to consult with the academic team to identify accessible music activities and interface designs.
 2. Prototype and Play: Informed by the consultations, experienced artists with disabilities will lead the designs of multisensory music making “kits” built by the academic team. The kits will be prototyped and piloted by the 25 participants to improve designs.
 3. Launch and Learn: 100 participants across Canada will take part in a remote residency program in which they receive two different kits over six months and to share what they create (e.g., livestream concert, video) to express their disability experiences.
- SSHRC Grant awarded in the amount of $449,996.00
- Principal Investigator: adam patrick bell
- I am a collaborator on this project.

Oct. 2019 – Nov. 2021

Project: Trauma and Resilience in Music Education: Haunted Melodies

- Co-edited volume with Deborah Bradley released in November 2021 with a copyright date of 2022.
- Brief Description of the Project: This book compiles perspectives from 12 authors on trauma and resilience in music education. It includes sections on theoretical perspectives, individual trauma, and societal trauma as it relates to music teaching and learning.

Oct. 2014 – June 2019

Project: Disturbing the Comfortable: Constructing an Activist Music Education (now retitled: Music Education for Social Change: Constructing an Activist Music Education)

- Book released June 2019.
- Brief Description of Study: This project constructs an activist music education for K-12 schooling based on the perspectives of 20 activist-musicians. With a focus on Freirian critical pedagogy, this book envisions Freirian critical pedagogy for music education.
- Michigan State University Humanities and Arts Research Program (HARP) Grant (16-HARP-Development-3181) awarded in the amount of $15,110, which facilitated a research leave in Fall 2017.
- Qualitative study in which I interviewed 20 activist-musicians (including people who work with activism and music) in order to consider what an “activist music education” might be in the context of school music
- Presented findings from this project at several conferences including the Society for Music Teacher Education (SMTE) in Greensboro, NC in September 2015 and 2019, the Research in Music Education conference (RIME) in Exeter, UK in April 2015 and 2019, the MayDay Conference in New Orleans, LA in June 2015, the Decolonizing Conference in Toronto in 2016, and the New York State School Music Association Conference in December 2017.

II. DISCIPLINED INQUIRY

Research Accolades:

My article, "Singing our own song: Navigating identity politics through activism in music" published Research Studies in Music Education was selected to appear in the 25th Anniversary Special Issue celebrating the journal. Eight articles in the history of the journal were selected for this honor and were identified as articles that "have been significant or influential over this time." About my article, editor Julie Ballantyne wrote: "In this article, Hess explores the intersections of activist school music education and identity politics for musicians, music students and teachers. Readers are provoked to consider the ways that music and music education is politicised and music educators challenged to reconsider their role in identity politics. This article provides a vision of music education that is both challenging and inspiring and in so doing, is likely to influence music education research and pedagogy far into the future."

June 2017 -

“Equity in Music Education Feature,” Music Educators Journal, Guest Editor

- Initiated an equity feature in the Music Educators Journal on equity in collaboration with individuals from the Cultural Diversity and Social Justice Area for Strategic Planning and Action
- The feature began in the September 2017 issue
- Music Educators Journal (MEJ) is seeking short articles (maximum 1,500 words in length) on topics of interest in the areas of equity and social justice, as they relate to music classrooms, community music-making, and rehearsal/performance spaces, for the MEJ occasional feature, “Equity in Music Education.” If you would like to submit an article for this column, please email it to MEJ Academic Editor Doug Orzolek at DCORZOLEK@stthomas.edu and Ella Wilcox at ellaw@nafme.org. To accompany this article, please provide your full name, your title, what and where you teach, and an e-mail address (these will be published if your article is accepted). Articles will be reviewed for clarity in writing style, scholarly interest, and utility. If your article is accepted for publication, you will also need to send in a high-resolution color photo of yourself, either a professional photo or an action shot of you teaching, and include the photographer’s name.
